PINCHOT DRY MEASURE PASSED BY 107 TO 100

All Liquor Licenses in State Automatically Expire.

NEW LAW NOW IN FORCE

Governor Pinchot's prohibition enforcement bill was passed finally by a vote of 107 to 100 in the House in the Legislature at Harrisburg on Tuesday afternoon. The bill passed the Senate in identically the same form. The formal signing of the measure was, of course, a foregone conclusion. That resulted when the bill in the course of routine procedure reached the Governor's desk late Tuesday night.

The passage of the bill in the House was witnessed by a great throng of visitors, advocates and opponents of the measure seemingly being about equally divided. A flood of oratory both for and against preceded the roll call, and telling points put forth by the rival speakers were warmly applauded. Even up to the actual calling of the roll most persons at Harrisburg believed the result to be in doubt. This was due in large measure to the reported absence of seven legislators who were pledged for the dry bill, but who were not to be found. They eventually showed up and were on hand when the final test came. Representative Tom Beaver, of Centre County, was among the 107 who voted for the bill.

When Governor Pinchot saw that his bill might lack the necessary number of votes to pass, which was 105, he sent out a hurry call for legislators who were reported to be wavering. He reprimanded some severely before lining them up for the roll call test.

The Pinchot bill wipes out the licensed saloon. Legislation is under way to refund to persons having paid license the unearned portion of the original fee paid. This, it is calculated, will cost the State about $50,000, and the legislation referred to carries an appropriation for that amount. Fiscal officers of the State say that with liquor licenses abolished the Commonwealth will be out approximately $5,000,000 in annual revenue heretofore received from license fees.

In many respects the Pinchot bill follows the lines of the Volstead federal law. For instance, the alcoholic content of beverages is governed absolutely by whatever percentage is permissible from time to time under the Volstead law. If the Volstead law, which now permits an alcoholic content of one-half of 1%, should be changed to allow a higher percentage, the Pinchot bill automatically adopts the newer percentage.

Private dwellings, used exclusively as such, may not be searched for beverages, even with a search warrant, under the Pinchot bill. Stated briefly, the intent of the bill is to stamp out the illegal manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

Beer, in the course of manufacture of near-beer, may contain a higher alcoholic content than one-half of 1%, but it must be reduced to that content before being sold.

A point which will likely be put up to the courts to determine is whether anybody and everybody may be permitted to sell near-beer. Heretofore such sales were controlled by licenses, but under the Pinchot bill there are to be no such things as licenses issued by the courts or any other authority.

Probably the most drastic feature of the whole bill is that which permits State police or other officers to search automobiles or other conveyances, with or without warrants. The same clause in the bill would permit the indiscriminate search of hand-baggage found in such conveyances. The constitutionality of this feature of the bill was openly questioned by legislators voting for it when it was up for second reading at Harrisburg on Monday night. The probability is, they pointed out, that this point will be one of the first to be tested in the higher courts.

Violations of the new law are to be punished by fines up to $1,000, or imprisonment of from 3 to 5 years, or both, at the discretion of the courts.

Holders of liquor licenses in Centre County, from what could be learned yesterday, will consult with their attorneys before making any definite plans for the future. Under their 1922 licenses they were permitted to sell near-beer, but no beverages containing more than one-half of one percent. alcoholic content. On the assumption that no license is now required to dispense such beverages hotel keepers in the county said that they expect to continue selling as usual. They will, however, be guided by the advice of their attorneys, they stated. Harrisburg advices say that some legislation will be enacted looking to the control of non-alcoholic beverages. Some form of tax is proposed.

Licenses for 1922 in Centre County automatically expire on Saturday night, March 31st. Of the several licenses granted for the year beginning April 1st, 1923, none have thus far been lifted, nor have license fees been paid. No retail licenses for the coming year were granted for Bellefonte or Penns valley hotels, except that for the J. R. G. Allison hotel at Millheim. It is understood that the hotel has since been sold, but no application for transfer of license has been filed. Aside from the one for Millheim, the only licenses granted were those in Snow Shoe and Rush Townships and Philipsburg.

WANT B. E. V. STATE ROAD

Concerted Movement on Foot to Gain New Highway.

A movement is on foot among Bellefonte, Unionville, Julian, Martha, Port Matilda, Hannah, Bald Eagle, Vail and Tyrone citizens to have the State Highway Department take some definite action on the Bald Eagle valley road between Bald Eagle and Milesburg. This stretch of road between Bellefonte and Tyrone would eliminate many miles of travel for folks traveling between Pittsburgh and Williamsport and that section of the east. A good portion of the highway has already been laid in concrete and that should be a good argument in the road's favor.

The Bald Eagle valley road is one of the most traveled roads in Central Pennsylvania and should have received attention long ago, but for various reasons it has been delayed. It is hoped the movement will result in much good and that before long this highway will receive due attention.

Crider Miller Injured

Crider Miller, a student at Franklin and Marshall college, enroute to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Miller, of Centre Hall, met with a serious accident on Tuesday. His right foot was so badly crushed that it may be necessary to amputate it above the ankle. He was admitted to the Bellefonte hospital and every effort is being put forth to save it, if possible. Miller was anxious to get to his home and when the passenger train stopped at Centre Hall, a local freight train was standing on the siding. Instead of waiting, he crossed between two cars of the freight train, walking on the end sill of one car. He got his traveling bag and was returning between the cars, when the freight train was signaled to give slack, this caused an unexpected jolt and his foot slipped, being caught between the bumper of one car and the end sill of the other car.

Prof. Stock Under Knife.

Professor Stock, principal of the Bellefonte High School, is critically ill at the Bellefonte Hospital. He underwent an operation for appendicitis on Wednesday, at which time inflammation had reached an advanced stage. Complications which had developed rendered it inadvisable to remove the appendix for the present. Notwithstanding this, he emerged from the operation in fairly good shape. Professor Stock was ill for some days, symptoms of appendicitis being apparent, but had recovered sufficiently to be about and on Monday he visited the High School. That night his condition became alarming and he was taken to the hospital for an immediate operation. His many friends are hopeful that he will speedily recover.

Carpenter's Wrists Broken.

While working at the remodeling of the Hayes building above Parrish's drug store last Friday, Benjamine Bequeath, a carpenter who was assisting the contractor, Edward Hepburn, fell and fractured both wrists. It seems that Bequeath was on a scaffold which collapsed when struck by accident with a piece of lumber, causing him to fall in an awkward position.

Freight Wreck Near Julian.

A wreck near Julian on Monday afternoon resulted in three freight cars, one loaded with wheat and two with machinery, to be damaged. The grain and machinery was scattered along the tracks. One of the cars "jumped" the tracks and the other two piled into it. Traffic was blocked for several hours until the Tyrone work train and wrecking crew cleared the tracks. Nobody was injured.

Indorsed Dr. Finegan

At a meeting of the Bellefonte Civic Club held on Monday evening, resolutions were adopted indorsing the administration of the Department of Education at Harrisburg under Dr. Finegan. The resolutions also urge that Dr. Finegan be re-appointed by Governor Pinchot.

PLAN BIG GATHERING OF HORSE SHOE TRAIL ASSN.

Will Have Noon Luncheon and Meeting at Bush House.

TO BE HELD ON APRIL 13

Robt. F. Hunter, chairman of the local board of directors of the Horse Shoe Trail association, presided at a meeting on Friday evening to boost the membership and plan for the big gathering to be held here at the Bush House on April 13. M. A. Landsy and George A. Beezer, the former who shares the honor with Lewis Daggett, of being the first or charter members from Bellefonte to join the association, together with about 18 others, mostly garage and hotel men, were at the meeting and all pledged themselves to become members. It is the desire to have about 50 members in Bellefonte to attend the gathering in the Bush House on April 13 and approximately half this number has been secured, each at the regular membership fee of $5.

The meeting scheduled for April 13 will be a big affair with boosters and members from towns all along the route which starts at Cumberland, Md., comes via Bedford, Altoona, State College, Pleasant Gap, to Bellefonte, Lock Haven, Jersey Shore and Williamsport, where it joins the Susquehanna trail. It is one of the prettiest roads to be found anywhere and will be widely advertised to increase tourist travel through this section.

While this is mostly advantageous to garage and hotel men, it cannot help but be a good thing for business men in other ways as well as serving to advertise the town, accordingly as our residents pride themselves in caring for their properties.

At the meeting on Friday evening, refreshments were served and discussions followed in which the good results to be obtained by being along the Horse Shoe trail were given most attention.

MRS. TONY WASSON'S DEATH INVESTIGATED

Coroners's Jury Conducts Inquiry into Sad Affair.

WILL TRY CASE IN JUNE

That the death of Mrs. Roberta Wagner Wasson, wife of A. G. Wasson, of Bellefonte, the latter more familiarly known hereabouts as Tony, was likely the result of injuries which she received in protecting herself when brutally attacked while alone in her room late on the night of March 2nd, was the verdict of a Coroner's Jury which conducted an inquest into the cause of the young woman's death. The inquest was held at Butler last Saturday and was attended by the young woman's mother and friends. The report also indicated that John Francesca, who is being held in the Kittanning jail, was the assailant who attacked her in her room and that the injuries which likely caused the fatal pneumonia, were the result of his beating her over the head and shoulders. In closing the report, the jury referred the case to the Coroner of Armstrong County for further investigation.

Whether Francesca, who is said to be 27 years old and married, will be prosecuted for murder was not made known by District Attorney Blaine Mast of Armstrong County, who attended the inquest and had shorthand notes of the testimony taken. Francesca was placed in the Kittanning jail and kept there since March 14th on a charge of aggravated assault and battery, with intent to commit rape.

In the testimony taken it was shown that Mrs. Wasson had a good reputation and had resided formerly in Butler. About five months ago she and her mother went to Parks Landing to work in the factory of the Wightman Glass company. In the same factory was employed John Francesca as a glassblower. Nothing in the testimony showed any reason why Francesca should have gone to the young woman's room on the night of March 2nd.

There were no eye witnesses to the attack in the room in an apartment house where Mrs. Wasson and her mother, Mrs. Wagner resided. It was on the first floor of a building, formerly a hotel, converted into apartments for use of glass factory employes.

The mother told of going out with neighbors to watch an ice gorge in the Allegheny river. When she returned Mrs. Wagner stated, she found much confusion about the house, her daughter suffering from shock and hardly able to talk. Later the daughter told her that Francesca had attacked her with a club and struck her upon the side and the head. He also struck her in the face with his fist, she told her mother. Mrs. Wagner also said that her daughter did not seem to be seriously injured at the time but she did not go to work the next day, which was Saturday, but remained about the house until Tuesday when it became necessary for her to remain in bed and a physician was summoned. Pneumonia developed and Mrs. Wasson was taken to the Butler County General hospital where she died on the 18th.

The day after the attack, it was alleged, Francesca came to the house and admitted being in Mrs. Wasson's room and made the remark, "If you had not acted the fool, this would not have happened." Francesca insisted on seeing "Bobbie" but was denied admittance, the witness stated. A billiard cue, said to have been used as a club by Francesca, was found in the house after the attack, it was said, but the cue was not offered in evidence.

An affidavit made by J. F. McNamee, superintendent of the glass factory, was read by the Coroner to the jury. In his statement, McNamee said that Roberta (Mrs. Wasson) had told him that she was asleep in her room and was awakened about 11:30 by some one in her room. She saw Francesca sitting on the side of her bed and asked what he wanted. He replied he was looking for a bandage. She told him to look in her mother's sewing basket and then said, "You get out of here. You have no business in this room." The statement continued that Francesca thereupon jerked the clothes from the bed and struck the young woman in the face. In the fight that followed she was struck twice by a club. She finally broke away and managed to reach a hand mirror with which she struck her assailant over the head and then ran into the hall-way.

Three young persons who had been watching the ice gorge and returned to the apartment over Mrs. Wasson's room, testified that they heard the struggle about 11:30 and some fussing at the door. When one of the three opened it, Mrs. Wasson fell into the room and onto the floor. They picked her up and laid her on a bed. She was in her barefeet and wore her nightdress. "Bobbie was very nervous and scarcely able to speak," the witness said. When asked what was wrong, she said Duckie (Francesca) had hit her and knocked her into a corner.

Dr. R. L. Stackpole, of Butler, made a report of an autopsy held on the body of Mrs. Wasson. He said that the direct cause of her death was double lobar pneumonia. The injuries received may have been inducing causes. No external marks of violence were found on the body. Two scars of previous operations were found. A slight discoloration on the right side of the head was discovered. Investigation revealed a blood clot under the skin tissue next the skull, the size of a half dollar, but the bone was not injured. Internal conditions of the body were described which the witness said in themselves would not have caused death. The injury on the head had been caused by some blunt instrument.

Dr. W. J. Grossman, of Butler, who had Mrs. Wasson taken to the hospital said that she was in a very weak condition when admitted on March 15th.

Francesca will be held for trial in court in Armstrong County in June. No further charges against him would be made at this time but a full investigation of the affair will be made.

SCORED PHILA. BOOTLEGGERS

Judge Quigley Tells How to Handle Them.

Judge Henry C. Quigley, who has been holding one of the Quarter Sessions courts in Philadelphia this month and is expected home the latter part of this week, on Monday told Philadelphia officers the enforcement laws were strong enough to prohibit if rightly used.

Stanford Smith, a colored youth, was held for selling intoxicating liquor. Testimony showed the booze contained 49% of alcohol by volume and sufficient fusel oil and other impurities to make it "decidedly dangerous" to human life.

Judge Quigley ordered the district attorney's office to apprehend the "real criminal who commits a crime that is almost as serious as murder." He told Major Samuel O. Wynne, chief of the Philadelphia county detectives, that the manufacturer of the concoction, known as "white mule," was the man who should be punished.

The prisoner said he had been working for a produce dealer who sold the stuff in a back room of his place at 10 cents a drink. Judge Quigley said:

"We all know there are certain propositions before the Legislature now aimed to break up this business, but the laws of the Commonwealth are now sufficient when properly enforced. If these laws are properly enforced there can be no difficulty in breaking up this poisoning of minds and bodies and even causing death."

There have been a number of deaths reported in Philadelphia recently attributed to bad liquor. The opinions which Judge Quigley expressed in Philadelphia are similar to convictions he has given in local court. Almost invariably the bootlegger meets with hard luck when brought before Judge Quigley. The customary sentence here is cost of prosecution, $500 fine and serve 6 months in jail.

STATE COLLEGE FIREMEN SAVED HOUSE AND BARN

Chas. Witmer Family, on Branch, Visited by Fire.

BURNED TWO BUILDINGS

The State College town fire company is given credit for saving the house and big barn on the farm of Charles Witmer, on the Branch, early on last Friday morning. As it was, the Witmers lost the smoke-house, together with their summer's meat supply, and an adjoining old log house. No insurance was carried.

The Witmers were sleeping when the fire started. They heard the meat falling in the smoke-house and were aroused. The smoke house was discovered in flames and a wind was carrying the sparks toward the log house, which was close to the residence. Directly in the path of the wind and sparks was the big barn. The situation was alarming to the Witmers and they summoned the State College firemen on an emergency call.

The firemen made good time in getting to the scene, but already the smoke-house was burned, together with the meat from four hogs. The log building was burning fiercely and a quantity of feed in it was destroyed. In a few minutes more the flames would have reached the house but for the good work of the firemen. They kept the loss under $1,000.

Mrs. Witmer had been smoking the meat last Thursday and had taken the kettle, with the embers, from the smoke-house. It is not known how the fire started.

Fire destroyed the barn and contents on the farm of Delbert Confer, about 11:30 o'clock on Monday morning. The loss was heavy, but partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Confer was alone when the flames were discovered. She tried in vain to save the stock in the barn, but the flames had too much of a start. Hay, straw, oats, corn and wheat, some farm implements, 1 horse, a calf and 10 pigs, were burned. It is also thought a few chickens were caught. The origin of the fire was not learned.

COSTLY FREIGHT WRECK

Brick, Sand and Stone Scattered from Ten Cars.

One of the most costly wrecks on the Bald Eagle valley branch of the Tyrone Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. occurred last Friday afternoon when an eastbound freight train met with an accident about one-half mile east of Milesburg. The loss was not estimated, but will run into thousands of dollars.

The train, in charge of Conductor William Resides, of Tyrone, was speeding along when 10 cars piled into confusion. It is said a broken flange on a wheel caused the first car to leave the rails and the others, all box cars, followed. They were loaded with brick and sand, one with stone, and this material was scattered along the tracks. Some of the cars were entirely ruined. Fortunately, no person was injured.

While wrecking crews cleared the tracks all trains were routed over the Tyrone and Lewisburg branch. The 8:10 passenger train from Tyrone to Lock Haven, local through Bald Eagle valley, run as far as the place where the wreck occurred where the passengers were transferred. It was late on Friday night before the tracks were fit for traffic to be resumed.

Over-Seas Graves Fund.

Bellefonte patriots now have the opportunity of adding their bit to the great national fund that is being solicited by the headquarters of the American Legion for the purpose of establishing a yearly income to provide for the decoration each Memorial day of the graves of American service men who are buried on European soil. Brooks-Doll post has made a contribution, and boxes have been placed at the following points to receive your dimes or dollars: Mott's Drug Co., Hazel & Co. dry goods store, Colonial restaurant and Runkle's drug store.

Trout Fishermen Interested.

Trout fishermen in this section will be interested in a meeting called for this Friday evening. The meeting is to consider plans for stocking local streams with more trout. It will be held in the office of the County Commissioners in the Court House at 7:30 o'clock. If you are interested in having more trout placed in Centre County's streams, be on hand.

BURNED MAN ALIVE TO PLEASE GODS

Sacrifice of Son by Father to End Drought in Rhodesia Shows Custom Yet Exists.

London.—Advices received from Bulawayo indicate that the custom of human sacrifice to allay the wrath of the gods still exists in Rhodesia.

It is reported that the elders of the Mtawara tribe, alarmed at the drought and the poor crops, consulted the rain doctor, and decided on what they claim to be the never-failing expedient of human sacrifice by burning. The lot fell on a native, who, it is alleged, had been intimate with another native's wife. It was discovered that the intended victim was the son of the rain doctor, who, however, proceeded with the sacrifice. The struggling man was bound and burned alive. Directly life was extinct heavy rains began.

The celebrations of the success of the sacrifice were interrupted by the arrival of the police. The elated tribe, not aware of having done wrong, showed the police the charred remains of the victim and told them of previous occasions on which similar sacrifices had been equally successful, the last one mentioned being in 1917.

They assert that the "rain spirit," whose name is Mwari, lives in their district. The local paramount chief is said to remember 72 natives who had been burned as rain sacrifices.

Many natives are reported to have been committed for trial. The scene of the sacrifice is said to be Chicangos Kraal on the Portuguese border in southern Rhodesia.

Passengers of Boston & Maine Railroad Train Have Miraculous Escape From Death.

Orange, Mass.—Passengers on a Boston & Maine railroad train had a thrilling experience and remarkable escapes from serious injury when two of the three coaches jumped the rails, plunged down a 15-foot embankment and slid out on the thick ice of Miller's river.

The ice supported the cars and the passengers scrambled to safety. The third car stopped on the embankment. Four of the train crew were slightly hurt. The engine and tender remained on the track. Spreading rails caused the accident, officials said.

Indian Richest of Americans

Three Hundred Thousand Red Brothers Own $130,000,000 of Forests and Woodlands.

ANNUAL INCOME TWO MILLIONS

Forests Conducted by Indian Forestry Service According to Advanced Principles—Administration Costs Indian Only 10 Per Cent.

Do you think Uncle Sam is making up for the past wrongs done the red brother? This story gives an interesting insight into what a paternal government now is doing for him.

Washington.—Sentimentally considered, it is generally conceded that Lo, the poor Indian, is right in the midst of the pauper class; but when his material assets are considered he becomes the richest of Americans, potentially and percapitally speaking; indeed, the richest of all humans. If the individual Indian could cash in on an equal distribution basis his share of the lands, live stock, minerals and forests at their present valuation he would be immeasurably better off than the average white American, says the forest and lumber information service of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, which has been making a study of the Indian forests, and incidentally reports that as against the average white man's $1,800, the red man would possess about $2,400; for the total Indian estate is $727,000,000 and there are but about 300,000 Indians.

One of the richest of the Indian assets is not often brought to public attention, viz., the Indian forests. As a lumberman, the Indian is collectively an exceptional magnate. The 300,000-odd Indians own 35,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber—an important factor in the American supply of forest products—worth today at least $100,000,000; and the young growth in these forests and the land they stand on represent $30,000,000 more. If this forest wealth were divided equally, every Indian in the country would have about $430 of forest wealth.

Awake to Value of Timber.

The Indians began to realize about 25 years ago that trees represented real wealth, and the last clash of any consequence between the military and Indians was in northern Minnesota in 1898 when the Leech Lake Chippewas literally took to the tall timber in full fighting strength when they concluded that loggers who had been allowed the privilege of removing dead and down timber from the reservation were not finding anything in the woods that wasn't dead and down, at least when they got through with it. It cost the lives of eight soldiers of the Third regular regiment and the wounding of about 25 others for the Indians to impress on the government that they were right on the job of looking after their timber. This was not an Indian uprising in a proper sense but was just a resort to arms, as the Indians saw it, to protect their established property rights. Whether this demonstration of force had anything to do with it or not, it is a fact that the systematic forestry and business management of the Indian timber lands began at about that time.

The Indian bureau of the Department of Interior asserts that during the last quarter of the Nineteenth century many millions of feet of timber were removed from Indian reservations in the states of Wisconsin and Minnesota without proper supervision of the cutting and without adequate protection of the interests of the Indians. Congress provided no funds for protection or for the development of a system of merchandising timber.

The first general act of congress dealing with the timber on Indian reservations was in 1889 and authorized the sale of dead and down timber by the Indians of any reservation, and one of 1897 specially authorized the sale of such timber on the lands of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. The Indian service considers now that both were unsound in principle as they encouraged deliberate injury of the timber by fire, to make it "dead and down," and surreptitious cutting. It was not until 1909 that congress gave authority for the development within the Indian service of a regular organization for the efficient administration of Indian timber lands. At that time $100,000 was appropriated for forestry work on the reservations. In the meantime there is no doubt that a large part of the forest wealth of the Indians was dissipated. Since 1909, however, the forestry branch of the Indian service has been building up an efficient system of administering timber lands in accordance with the basic principles of the science of forestry. In 1910 congress authorized the sale of mature green timber for the first time. It then became possible not only to protect the Indian timber lands from fire and trespass, but also to derive from the forests an income that has financed much of the recent general industrial development on Indian reservations.

The Indians own altogether 7,000,000 acres of commercial forests in addition to large adjacent areas of woodland; the two classes of land including an area larger than the combined areas of Massachusetts and Connecticut. The mature timber standing on these lands is estimated at 35,000,000,000 feet with a value of about $100,000,000. The Indians own forests of commercial importance in fifteen states, but the most extensive holdings are in the far western states. Oregon is at the top of the list of Indian timber states, followed in relative order by Washington, Montana, Arizona, New Mexico, Wisconsin, California, Idaho and Minnesota.

The handful of Klamath Indians in southern Oregon, who are the great timber lords of the aborigines, own about 8,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber standing in one of the finest tracts of virgin timber, largely western yellow pine, in the whole of the United States. At present stumpage prices this timber is worth at least $25,000,000. As there are only 1,178 Indians, including a few Piutes and Modocs associated with the Klamaths in the ownership of this timber, a Klamath is worth in timber alone nearly $25,000 and is entitled to rank with the Osages and other plutocratic Indians of the oil land reservations. Down in the southwestern corner of the United States the Indians of the Fort Apache reservation have probably the finest body of timber in that state; and back in Wisconsin the Menominee reservation Chippewas still own a billion feet of hard and soft timber, which is recognized as the finest timber remaining in that state. The Indians of Minnesota own some of the finest stands remaining of eastern white pine, which is now nearing commercial extinction and is proportionately valuable.

Since the establishment of the Indian forestry service in 1910 the Indian lands have been administered according to a policy of reconciling forestry principles with the present economic interests of the Indians. The reservation forestry problem is not just the same as that of the national forests, for it must be remembered that the Indian forests are private property of the Indians held in trust for them by the United States government. Many of the Indians, too, own their lands in individual allotments; and in such cases their timber is held for them from much the same point of view as an individual white settler would take. If the land is adaptable to agriculture the cutting is clean and without a view to reforestation. On the other hand in the case of the tribal forests the idea is to reconcile the need of immediate revenue for the owners with assurance of future value of the property, and here the principle is one of perpetual lumbering. Only mature trees are cut, and provision is made for protecting young trees from injury during logging operations and for the cleaning up and burning of debris of logging. The timber is generally disposed of to contractors through competitive bids, the contractor removing the timber himself under the supervision of and according to the regulations of the Indian forest service.

Most Advanced Forestry Practice.

It is the boast of the Indian forest service that its regulations governing logging operations, promulgated in 1920, represent as advanced a state as has yet been made in American forestry practice anywhere.

An illustration of the public or what might be called the white man's interest in the Indian forests is found in general regulation No. 10, which provides that in the discretion of the officer of the Indian forest service, in charge, "a strip not exceeding 300 feet in width on each side of streams, roads and trails and in the vicinity of camping places and recreation grounds, may be reserved, in which little or no cutting will be allowed." This provision assures the maintenance of scenic values on the Indian reservations.

Notwithstanding forestry regulations, some of the largest timber sales ever made by the United States government and at the highest prices have been made of Indian reservation timber in the last ten or twelve years. Five sales have amounted to approximately 500,000,000 feet each and a dozen others have exceeded 100,000,000 feet each. Large units of yellow pine have been sold on the Klamath reservation at $5.50 per thousand feet, and on the Flathead reservation in Montana at $6.50 a thousand. White and Norway pine of inferior quality on the Nett Lake reservation in Minnesota have sold at $16 and $13.65 respectively, and in a recent sale of nearly half a billion feet on the Quinaielt reservation in Washington, western hemlock brought the unprecedented price of $3.00, and cedar, spruce, Douglas fir and other species were sold at $5.00 a thousand. The timber of three units of this reservation sold during 1921 totaled more than 1,000,000,000 feet. From the Klamath reservation alone more than 100,000,000 feet are being cut each year. The latest sale of Indian timber was that of the Valley Creek unit in the Flathead reservation in Montana, 130,000,000 feet, at $5.12 a thousand for the western yellow pine and $3.01 for the other timber. During the past decade the value of the timber removed from lands under the jurisdiction of the Indian service has exceeded $1,500,000 annually, and this income will presently exceed $2,000,000. The cost to the Indians of the commercial and forestry administration of their lands, including the protection of the timber from fire, insect infestation and trespass, has been less than $150,000 annually.

Indians Get 90 Per Cent.

The Indian forest service is very proud of the fact that more than 90 per cent of the gross income from the Indian forest has been placed to the credit of individual Indians or tribes for use in their support or industrial advancement.

A striking illustration of the economic salvation prudent administration of their forests has meant to the Indians in many cases is found in the Jicarilla Apache reservation in New Mexico. In 1910 the Jicarillas, exceedingly poor, broken by disease and wretched beyond belief, were apparently nearing extinction. By means of funds realized from sales of their timber they have been rehabilitated morally and physically and are now far on the road to industrial independence.

The regulations make it imperative for loggers in the Indian forests to employ Indians preferably wherever they are available and fitted for the work. Many hundred Indians thus have lucrative employment by themselves, so to speak.

Extensive valuation surveys have been made on a number of reservations and the work is going ahead as fast as funds become available. This survey, besides furnishing data for a topographic map, gives the amount, kind and quality of timber, the soil classification and its adaptability to irrigation and farm crop production.

Importance of Surveys.

The surveys are also very important in protecting the forests from fire. On all the reservations containing timber of any importance telephone lines have been constructed from central headquarters to various strategic points such as ranger cabins in the mountains and the fire lookouts. The latter are located on high mountain points, which afford a panoramic view of the timber below. Men are stationed in these lookouts throughout the fire season, constantly scanning the forests with binoculars. If such an observer discovers a fire he immediately determines its location with an instrument known as a fire-finder and promptly telephones the information to the forester in charge, who immediately dispatches a crew with tools and supplies to fight the fire. The Indian service co-operates with the forest service (national forests) of the Department of Agriculture and other agencies in fire detection and suppression. This, with a systematic patrol of experienced rangers and guards, affords insurance against heavy losses from fire. The average cost of this insurance has never exceeded half a cent an acre.

The proceeds from the administration of the Indian forests in the last twenty-five years have amounted to about $25,000,000 and it is likely that the Indian forests will bring in around $2,000,000 a year for the next twenty years, and a smaller sum indefinitely. Moreover, the permanent Indian forests will contribute in a considerable measure to the maintenance of a certain though limited supply of timber in the future.

TOOK HYPO-COD AND FEELS LIKE NEW MAN

"I suffered with chronic bronchitis and general debility. Those coughing fits would hit me and made me as limp and weak as a dish rag. I was all run down and even my appetite was poor. Then one night I read an advertisement in the Pittsburgh paper claiming that Hypo-Cod was good for coughs like that and to build you up. I was skeptical, but after I looked at a package and saw the formula I bought it, and it is great. I regained my appetite and increased my weight. The bronchial cough left me after the second bottle of Hypo-Cod and today I feel as fine as I ever did in my life. I like Hypo-Cod also because there isn't any mystery about what you are taking. It tells you everything right on the package," declared Mr. Harry P. Kelly, one of Pittsburgh's well known railway clerks, 190 S. 17th St.

Hypo-Cod has been found good by half million people in Pennsylvania. It isn't a patent medicine. Eminent physicians often prescribe it. Druggists say it is amazing the way it helps customers. It is made of the very finest ingredients (see formula and full directions on bottle). The name Earle Chemical Co. on bottle is guarantee of finest quality and purity in medicine. Don't risk having throat, bronchial or chest weakness this time of year. It is dangerous. Save time. All druggists have Hypo-Cod. It works quick. Avoid substitutes.—Advertisement.

NAME TOO MUCH FOR THEM

Hawaiian Natives Found It Practically Impossible to Translate "Roosevelt" Into Their Language.

The village of Roosevelt has changed its name back to Pukoo. Not many persons, probably, know where this village is. It is situated in an obscure corner of one of the Hawaiian islands, and some years ago it had as one of its residents a Dr. E. S. Goodhue, who was anxious that the name of the famous president should never die out of this section of American territory. So he got up a petition to the postmaster general at Washington, asking that the original name of the village should be altered, as far as the mail was concerned, to Roosevelt.

The request was granted, but the new name bothered the natives terribly. They have no "r" or "s" or "t" in their alphabet, and the nearest Hawaiian equivalent to Roosevelt turns out to be Lukiweki. So they sent a second petition, in which they stated that they were deceived into signing the first, and asked that the native name of the village be restored. The petition has been granted.

"Well, father," was the reply, "Jenkins came up to me in the dinner hour and said, 'What's your father?'"

"And what did you say?" asked his father.

"I didn't say anything," answered the boy. "I just hit him."

Organizing DeMolay Chapter.

The organizing of the Chapter of DeMolay for Centre County is making rapid progress. Constans Commandery of Knights Templar of Bellefonte who will be the sponsors for this Chapter, have passed the resolutions and assumed that duty at its last session. The Board of Advisors have been named with Past Grand Commander Wilson I. Fleming as its chairman. Considerable money has already been pledged, application has been made for the charter and it is thought that the chapter can be constituted in April. The name of the Chapter will be the Penn-Centre Chapter Order of DeMolay for Boys. This wonderful work for the upbuilding of the country said by many to be the greatest thing for that purpose ever devised, takes the boys from 16 to 21 years of age and in a fine way by a beautiful ritual teaching filial love, reverence, courtesy, comradeship, fidelity, cleanliness and patriotism with the Bible, school books and the Flag of our country as their lights, has pointed the way as a new citizenry of the country that in a few years will begin to make itself felt for a wonderful good. Nearly 500,000 boys enrolled in a little over 2 years, with close to 1,000 chapters in the United States, with Pennsylvania so far only 2 chapters of 1,000 members, but more forming every day until it is prophesied that this state alone will have 100,000 in a few years. Acceptable members will be taken in this chapter from any part of Centre County.

Car Shortage Increasing.

"While the railways are breaking all records for this time of year in moving freight," says the Railway Age, "the shortage of transportation is again beginning to increase. The car shortage reached its maximum in the last week of October, and then declined steadily until the week ended February 8, when the net shortage was 41,894 cars. It then began to increase, and at the latest report was 64,814 cars. The reason for this increase is not difficult to find. The total number of cars loaded with freight in the week ended March 4, in spite of bad weather, was 917,896. This was the largest number of cars ever loaded with freight in any year before June.

Moving is in Progress.

Moving is in progress for many families this week and next. Quite a large number, comparatively, still have no houses in which to move, but are expected to vacate. "The Republican" plans to follow the usual custom of giving a list of the changes to be published in next week's paper. If you know of any movings and will inform us at the office, your assistance will be appreciated. Indications are that the number of persons moving this year is about the same as it has been for several years past.

The carcass was not fit for consumption on account of the punishment it had endured and it was therefore buried.

Secure Additional Power

The management of the Keystone Power Co was considerably disappointed when late Wednesday afternoon the 2000 Kilowatt turbine burned out. This resulted in the failure of electric current over the entire community for probably half an hour, a condition which the Keystone officials keenly regretted but were unable to avoid. The Keystone corporation has been negotiating with the Penn Central Power Co. for some time for the purchase of power to help them out in just such cases of emergency as that occurring on Wednesday. A tie line will probably be completed between the two companies by July 1st.

SUMMER FORESTRY COURSE

Mont Alto Mountain Camp From June 16 to July 28.

The Pennsylvania department of forestry has announced its second summer extension course in forestry to be given at a mountain camp adjacent to the State forestry school, at Mont Alto. The course, which will be given by the regular forest school faculty, will extend from June 16 to July 28 and will require mornings only. Afternoons will be given to recreation and sport, or additional work may be taken.

Located on the Mont Alto state forest in the heart of the South mountains, this camp is one of the best located spots that could be selected for the study of forests, trees, flowers and the wild animals of the forest, according to Dr. E. A. Ziegler, the school's director.

The course will appeal to out-door people generally, but in particular to botany and nature-study teachers, agricultural high school teachers, leaders of scouts and campfire girls and natural science students. The opportunity to learn our native trees and flowers, birds and animals, as well as to identify the different kinds of wood, and the ways of the wild things will make this course a continual field excursion of absorbing interest. Anyone interested should write to Dr. E. A. Ziegler, Forest School, Mont Alto, Pa.

How to Use Mail Boxes.

It gives me pleasure to announce to the public that through the splendid co-operation of the patrons in the placing of a slot in the door or providing other receptacles for the receipt of mail, I can report 100% compliance with the recent ruling of the post office department. This co-operation on your part will result in greater efficiency and more prompt handling of the mail. I wish to call your attention to the fact that your mail slot or receptacle is not to be used for outgoing mail, as street letter boxes have been provided for that purpose and are placed at convenient points; nor should they be used by concerns for the disposition of advertising matter, as they are for United States mail only.

Ask $3,200,352 for Penn State.

Taking the ground that the amount set aside in the Pinchot budget for State College for the coming two years will necessitate having no Freshman class in 1924, friends of the institution sent to Harrisburg a separate bill appropriating $3,200,352. The Pinchot budget provided only $1,800,000, of which $500,000 would have to go to agricultural extension, leaving approximately $1,300,000 for all other college work. The new bill introduced in the Legislature will, if passed, make possible continuing not only agricultural extension, but also engineering and mining extension and summer school for two years.

State Basket Ball Honors.

Nanticoke High school quintet won the state championship for basket ball for the season of 1922—23 at State College on Saturday evening, nosing out ahead of the Monessen High team. The score was 23—21. It was a remarkable up-hill fight. During three-fourths of the game Monessen was favored and seemed a sure winner. A field goal by a player named Davis won the victory for Nanticoke. Earlier in the day the strong Harrisburg Tech team was defeated by Monessen, 36—31.

Play Basket Ball Tonight.

The game to decide the championship of the Mountain High School Basket ball league, is scheduled for play this Thursday evening on the Tyrone "Y" floor. Mount Union and Philipsburg are rather evenly matched although Philipsburg is somewhat favored as likely champions.

Wm. H. Austin Elected.

During that period he missed very few sessions of the Sunday school.

Not in Favor of Daylight Saving.

The Senate on Tuesday passed the anti-daylight savings bill, the Derrick bill which prohibits municipalities from passing daylight savings ordinances. The vote was 34 to 14. The bill was passed onto the house with little chance for its being defeated. It was desired to exclude Philadelphia and Allegheny counties from its provisions which makes Eastern standard time the legal time, but this attempt failed.

Advised to Go Easy.

Sugar prices are now being probed, it being the expressed belief that increased prices are due to an attempt at profiteering. While this investigation is in order, consumers have been advised to go easy in purchasing sugar and follow a hand-to mouth plan.

AN unprecedented demand for Atlas exists right now — a demand that cannot be met unless the empty Atlas bags now in users' hands are returned. In the course of a year close to $5,000,000.00 worth of bags are needed by Atlas. This would be a heavy burden on cement users if the bags were not returned and reused, so cutting down the number of new bags needed.

Return your empty Atlas bags promptly to your dealer. Help him, and help us, keep Portland Cement the cheapest of all manufactured products.

IOWA AUXILIARY HELPS MANY

Relief for Disabled, According to Report of Committee Head, Reaches Nearly $5,000.

Woman relatives of former service men, banded together as members of the Iowa auxiliary of the American Legion, have a remarkable record for relief work completed among disabled soldiers. Nearly $5,000 was spent by the members of the organization, according to reports just made public by Mrs. W. A. Quinn, head of the welfare and hospital relief committee of the organization.

Mrs. W. A. Quinn.

Men in Iowa hospitals came in for the lion's share of the benefits, according to Mrs. Quinn's report. Disabled men in three hospitals now hear radio concerts, due to the activities of the relief committee of the auxiliary, for complete sets have been installed in the hospitals.

Patients in the state hospitals received birthday boxes, sent them by women of the auxiliary, and Iowa men in other hospitals throughout the United States have received more than 1,600 boxes of dainties prepared by these active workers. The government hospital at Tucson, Ariz., alone received 400 boxes from the Iowans, and patients there declared that the arrival of these boxes was the event of their Christmas day.

Gifts from the women included clothing, toilet articles, stationery, subscriptions to magazines, couch hammocks and recreational equipment.

Much money was spent in direct relief work, Mrs. Quinn estimating that $4,787 had been used by her committee during the year's activity. And the auxiliary in Iowa plans to continue the work, expecting to increase the amount of money expended during the past year.

FOR THE VETERANS' BUREAU

National Press Club Post, No. 20, of the American Legion has had the honor of having one of its charter members, Major William Wolffe Smith, appointed general counsel for the United States Veterans' Bureau.

Maj. W. W. Smith

During the war Major Smith entered the army as a captain of the sanitary corps and was attached to the staff of the surgeon general for the purpose of establishing a chain of newspapers throughout the country. Sixty-five papers, of which the "Come-Back" at Walter Reed Hospital is the parent sheet, were started. These papers were the first vehicle of expression for the disabled veterans.

Prior to entering the service Major Smith was assistant to the third assistant secretary of war, serving in civilian capacity. Following the armistice he went into the regular army, serving in the Quartermaster corps as captain. He resigned in 1922, and now holds the rank of major, in the Q. M. Reserve corps.

Major Smith began his career when nineteen years old as a reporter for the Washington bureau of the Baltimore Sun. He was born in Logansport, Ind., in 1874, and moved, with his family, to Indianapolis when he was six years old, where he attended school. Hanover college, DePauw, Johns Hopkins, George Washington Law school and the National Law school contributed to his education. He was graduated from the latter. Taking up the practice of law in 1914, he abandoned the newspaper game in favor of the legal profession.

SERVICE CROSS FOR FOREMAN

"I was mad as h—l at the enemy." Thus does Brig. Gen. Milton J. Foreman, one of the founders of the American Legion, characteristically describe his action near Maucourt, France, on November 4, 1918, for which he has just been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, one of the highest of United States war decorations. The announcement of the presentation was recently made through army officials at Chicago.

M. J. Foreman

General Foreman commanded the 122d Field Artillery, a unit of the 33rd division, but which was assigned temporarily to the 89th division during the final days of the Argonne engagement. This became a part of the "flying wedge" which General Pershing has commended for valor in action.

The particular act of heroism, which has won for the Illinois man the coveted decoration, took place on November 4, 1918, when his outfit had been subjected to continuous and deadly machine gun fire from the enemy. Asking for volunteers, General Foreman headed a handful of enlisted men, which sallied out from the American lines, located the unseen gunners, and soon drove them out with fire from his own batteries.

General Foreman was born in Chicago of poor parents, but made his way, by dint of hard efforts, to the top of the legal profession in his home city and state.

Early in 1894, he enlisted as a private in a cavalry of the Illinois National Guard, to become captain of his troop during the Spanish American war. He was advanced to colonel, and headed the organization in 1916, when in service on the Mexican border. At the outbreak of the World war, he understood that a cavalry organization was not to be taken overseas, and converted his regiment from a cavalry unit to an artillery outfit almost overnight.

His outfit, the 122nd Field Artillery, went overseas as a part of the 33rd division, and while there, General Foreman was cited by the French and Belgian governments for his part in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives. He has already received the Distinguished Service Medal.

General Foreman presided at the Legion's first caucus held in Paris, and was one of the framers of the constitution. He was chosen as first department commander of Illinois, and ranks as a past national commander of the organization, because of his executive activity at Paris.

One of the founders of the "Illinois Veterans' Trust" which proposes to turn over the funds received from the state bonus, for the creation of a trust to aid disabled men, General Foreman heads another movement which will become of great benefit to ex-service men of his state.

NAVY POST CHAP, ICE CHAMP

William Shepherd, Cleveland (Ohio) "Gob" Pulls Down Coveted Honors in Skating Events.

Skimming along the ice at the speed of an express train is the favorite sport of William Shepherd, Cleveland Legionnaire. At least that is what the "gobs" of Bill's post will tell you, for along with being finance officer of the Kelley Ingram Navy post 55, of the Ohio Department of American Legion, he also breaks records for the post in the skating events held in and around the city.

In the recent Ohio outdoor championship, held at Edgewater park in Cleveland, Shepherd annexed first honors in the 220 and 440-yard events, took second in the half-mile race and third in the mile, scoring a total of 90 points. He made record time in the 220—18 seconds, and in the 440, just exactly doubled that time, 36 seconds.

That American Legion emblem on "Bill's" jersey somehow just seems to flash across the line ahead of his competitors in most events. Even his thirteen-year-old brother, "Art," wins too, for the little fellow took the class C championship in the same meet, while a sister, Edna, also placed in events during the day.

LIFER IS FREED BY CONFESSION

Boy Admits Slaying Officer and Clarence McKinney Goes Back to Young Bride.

SERVES FIVE MONTHS

Girl Wife Works in Cincinnati Restaurant to Get Funds to Use in Effort to Secure Husband's Release.

Wilmington, O.—Clarence Leroy McKinney, who only a short time ago left here for the Ohio penitentiary, a murderer in the eyes of the law, came back, had his innocence legally and publicly proclaimed, and left amidst universal acclaim to take up his life where a twist of fate halted it five months ago.

With his girlish wife, who unceasingly has fought for his liberation, McKinney, who served five months of a life sentence in the penitentiary for the murder of Policeman Emery McCreight, a crime which Louis Vandervoort of Jamestown, has admitted, boarded a train for Cincinnati.

He was smiling, and apparently there was no rancor in his heart for the miscarriage of justice.

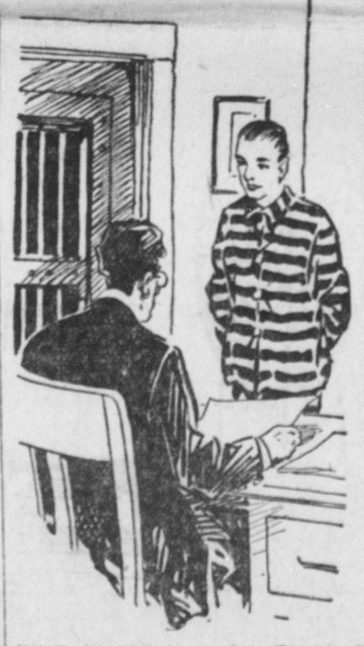
"I have no ill feelings towards any one here," he told Wilmington people who crowded around him.

Convicted despite his protests of innocence of the murder of Special Policeman Emery McCreight, at Wilmington February 14, 1922, McKinney, a huckster, was unable in the eyes of the jurors to furnish a conclusive alibi.

Pleads Guilty to Murder.

The same courtroom at Wilmington where McKinney was sentenced, with the same judge presiding, a boy of 20, Louis Vandervoort, son of a wealthy fruit grower near Jamestown, first arrested on a charge of robbery recently pleaded guilty to the murder of McCreight. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. Walter Bangham, 19, an accomplice, pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was given a one to twenty years sentence in the Mansfield reformatory.

Authorities in Green county, which adjoins Clinton county, have been conducting an investigation into statements made by boy friends of Vandervoort that he shot and killed Policeman Elvas Matthews in Xenia in December, 1922. Vandervoort was implicated in the McCreight murder by friends, who declared he had boasted of his prowess with a revolver, claiming that two notches cut in the butt of his pistol represented dead policemen, after he had been arrested for robbery.



"Well, We All Have Our Troubles," He Said Calmly.

Warden Imparts Glad News.

Summoned by Warden P. E. Thomas to his office, from the penitentiary loom mill, McKinney received philosophically the announcement that he was to be freed.

"Well, we all have our troubles," he said calmly. "I've always had a feeling that I'd get out. I haven't felt so very bad because I knew I wasn't guilty. I've felt more sorry for my wife and my mother than for myself—the humiliation was hard on them."

McKinney said his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McKinney, reside on a farm near Bluffton, Ind. His wife, to whom he was married a short time before he was sentenced, has been working in a Cincinnati restaurant obtaining funds to be expended in an effort to free her husband.

Thousands See Rescue in Mid-Air.

Chicago.—With traffic blocked and thousands of persons looking on breathlessly, Earl Wagner, an electrician, was rescued from his perilous position a hundred feet above the street at a Chicago theater. Wagner was hanging to a rope which had twined about one foot as he fell from a swinging chair. He hung head downward for 15 minutes until rescued by firemen.

Every City Has Its Own Voice

Nerve-Racking Conditions of North Almost Entirely Absent in South America.

OLD WORLD MELODY PREVAILS

Traveler in Havana Misses Shriek of Northern Newsboy and Hears Instead a Mellow Chant—Lima Quiet and Sleepy.

New York.—None but a dead city is without its characteristic voice. Each has its distinctive symphony of sound, changing with the hours from the roar of midday to the lullaby of dawn, and varying in locality from the brawl of factory wheels to the babel of busy streets.

North American cities are much alike in these manifestations. Their differences lie chiefly in volume.

Remove the traffic din of a North-American city, says the New York Times, and there would remain for a time almost a dumbness. Most of the minor notes are stilled by an overbearing competition of noise or made raucous themselves in their effort to be heard. Perhaps this accounts for the harsh, aboriginal cry of the North-American newsboy.

It is in Havana that the southward-bound traveler first misses the shriek of the familiar street arab bawling his papers. Under the windows, instead, there will be heard a mellow chant, at a singing rather than a shrieking pitch, always in at least two notes, ending upon the higher.

Not that the composite voice of Havana is dulcet and low. It is, on the contrary, vociferous and loud, the dominant note in its cacaphony being the honk of its taxis.

Havana, in truth, seems to have no aversion to noise. It does its utmost, but from its medley of sounds an old world melody has not yet been erased.

Insensible to Noise.

Like the Oriental, the Spanish-American seems insensible to noise. He is gregarious in his manner of life, and appears to find no need for the privacy so essential to the Anglo-Saxon.

Outside such cosmopolitan centers as Buenos Aires there is a vigorous survival in South America of the old Spanish sereno. Of his outfit of keys, dope, pike, pistol and whistle only the latter remains. The hour is no longer shouted into iron-barred patios, together with the news of the night watches, but police whistles shrill through the small hours their assurance that the law is alert.

Most particularly may Arequipa, of all the Andean cities, lay claim to the church bell as its dominant voice. The newcomer is jarred awake by it, violently, in the misty, shuddering gloom of his first morning there, its primary tongue being a resounding stroke of a huge gong in the cathedral tower on the main plaza.

Lima, once capital of all the South American continent, has a sedate and quiet air. It is too aristocratic to be strident, and too far submerged in the sleepy afternoon of its gilded career to express itself in any striking overtone of sound. Its automobiles and its three-horse carts go about their business with a minimum of sound. The street merchant is less vociferous and the long siesta interposes a silent mid-day between the more animated hours.

Callao is noisome, rather than noisy, both from proximity to the guano island that rises at its front door and from the squalor in which a large part of the population lives.

Callao is a port and its dominant voice is that of the sea and the seafaring activities of its water front.

La Paz is afflicted with the motor car, which leads a harsh and boisterous life upon the Bolivian capital's sharp hills and cobblestones. But in the early morning, before the tourists and the handful of dente decente—which is to say the decent gentry—foreign and domestic, have brought these anachronistic chariots into requisition, a far more fundamental and characteristic note can be heard. The donkey trips into view, over the rough paving stones, urged by his Indian driver's curious combination of whistle and hiss. Llama trains patter by and there is over all the scrape of leather sandals and of aboriginal bare feet.

An Indian village is free from the alarums that help so largely in building up the civilized complex. There is no clatter of motor car or wagon in small town streets, or upon the burro trails that creep through the highland districts of Bolivia and Peru.

Buenos Aires is international and its streets echo those of Washington and Paris. Montevideo is both a newer and an older Madrid. Rio de Janeiro is an artist's dream of Lisbon, although in a larger sense it is as individual and national as anything on the continent. And as for Santiago, it is a new and greater Granada—though its astonishing citadel park of Santa Lucia is but a pale similitude of the Alhambra.

Glasgow to Be Slumless City

Scottish Metropolis Providing Municipally-Owned Homes in Suburbs for Working Class.

IS SECOND CITY OF BRITAIN

Though Inland, Glasgow Dominates the World's Shipbuilding Industry—Pioneer in Municipally-Owned Public Services.

Washington, D. C.—Glasgow, Scotland, whose officials have announced that they will wipe out one of the last of its slum districts and provide instead municipally-owned homes in the suburbs, thus bids fair soon to become one of the few slumless great cities. Something of this Scottish metropolis, which in many ways is one of the most interesting cities in the world, is told in a bulletin just issued from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Glasgow is inland, yet it dominates the world's shipbuilding industry and has turned out more of the great ships that daily carry the pleasure-seekers and business men, the mails and freights, and the grim steel engines of war than any salt-water rival," says the bulletin. "And in spite of its off-the-sea location on a stream across which, a century ago, a child could wade, the tonnage of ships that now berth at its quays and docks is two-thirds that of New York.

"Incidentally, Glasgow, though its name may not be quite as familiar as other British towns, is surpassed in size in Great Britain only by London; and with its more than a million inhabitants, it is barely outranked by only two other cities in the far-flung British empire—Calcutta and Bombay. It is in easy reach of becoming the second city under the British flag.

Made the Sea Come to It.

"How Glasgow, relatively a small community on a shallow stream—as daring and more successful than Mahomet with his mountain—made the sea come to it, is one of the most fascinating of the romances of engineering. For a long time freight for the city was brought in ships to a point 40 miles down on the Clyde estuary and carried the rest of the way on pack-horses and in carts. Later a port was established 19 miles away; but as the city grew the need for a port at its door became more apparent. The situation seemed hopeless, but in 1773 engineers hit upon the scheme of narrowing the channel and making it dig its bottom deeper.

"The plan worked. The pitifully meager 2-foot depth of those days had become 8 feet by 1836, 22 feet by 1900, and is now 26 feet—sufficient to accommodate the huge modern ocean liners. Picks, wielded by wading men, started the loosening of the river bottom in the old days; then came horse-drawn harrows. In late years explosives and the most modern of steam dredges have helped keep the channel to its depth. Though Glasgow's waterway is where the river Clyde has flowed for ages, it has been truly said that it is 'as artificial as the Suez canal.'

"Except where there are commercial quays and docks, practically every foot of the Clyde waterfront from Glasgow to the estuary is now taken up with the world's greatest and busiest shipyards.

"Glasgow's fame has gone farthest, perhaps, because of the wonderful record of its city government and the somewhat unusual municipal enterprises which it has conducted for its inhabitants. Its numerous municipally-owned and operated services might well have drawn the charge of 'Bolshevism' had they not proved successful business ventures long before that term was invented. The city took over its water works at an early date and developed them. It has operated its own gas works since 1869, and even rents cook stoves to householders for a small fee. Since 1892 the city has not only lighted its streets from municipally-operated electric engineering stations, but has also furnished current for industry and for lighting dwellings. The street railways have been owned since 1872 and operated since 1894 by the city.

Municipal Wash Houses.

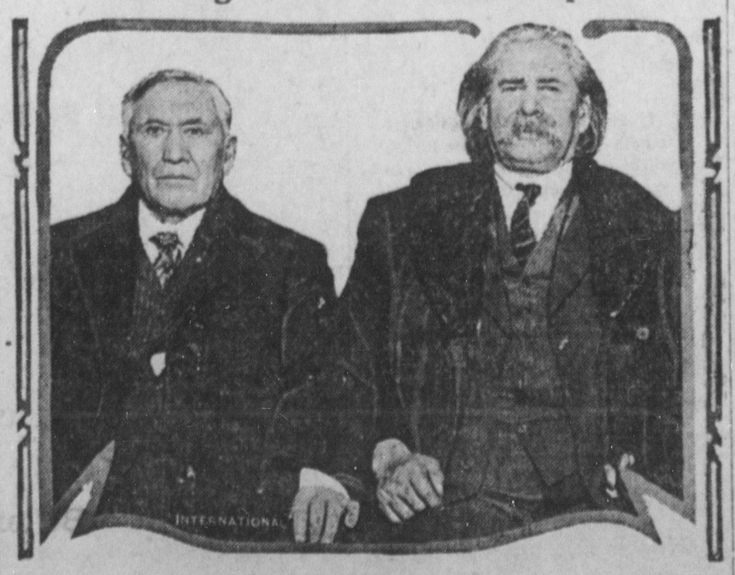
"There are a score or more of city-owned bath houses and wash houses where family washing may be done with modern facilities; and since 1870 the city has conducted municipal lodging houses. There is also a municipal 'family home' where children are assured good care while their parents are at work. In the provision of public markets, libraries, parks and playgrounds, the city was a pioneer. A number of bands are kept busy providing music in the parks during the summer.

"Industrially, it might be said that 'Glasgow made the steam engine, and the steam engine made Glasgow.' James Watt made his great invention at Glasgow university. A few years after Robert Fulton's 'Clermont' had made its first trip on the Hudson, the first steamboat in Europe was operated on the Clyde at Glasgow. Coal and iron ore were developed near by. Blast furnaces and machine shops came. Now Glasgow, having made her river, built her ships, equipped them with 'made-in-Glasgow' machinery, and bunkered them with Glasgow coal, sends them to the ends of the earth to reap profit for the old home town."

Stone Ink Slabs.

The Chinese schoolboy and the Chinese scholar must have their ink slabs for the mixing of their Chinese ink. These are made from a stone found at Nankangfu, are very artistic and represent fish swimming in ponds, flowers growing in water gardens, and buffaloes lying in cooling, refreshing pools. They are also made in square, oblong and round shapes and varying in size, weight and height. One particular kind of stone supposed to have been discovered in the Sung dynasty will retain the ink wet and moist for a whole month.

Claiming Land in Philadelphia



Left to right are Chief Amos S. Bear and Chief War Eagle of the Oneida tribe, who are in Philadelphia to establish claims to titles of property at Chestnut and Second streets, which they say is the property of the Six Nations, of which Chief War Eagle is the official interpreter and spokesman. The title to the land has not been clearly invested in the rights of the Indians, but every owner since the time of William Penn has failed to build on the property for fear of being dispossessed.

SAVED LIFE SAYS MRS. WAGENAAR

Portland Lady Fell Off 40 Pounds, but Declares Tanlac Restored Her Fully.

"For nine years," declared Mrs. Ella Wagenaar, 268 Graham St., Portland, Ore., recently, "I was almost a nervous wreck and never knew what it was to feel well.

"I was suffering from a general breakdown and, oh, it's just impossible to describe the pain and misery I endured. My stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a morsel of solid food. I lost forty pounds and was so weak I tottered like an infant when I walked. Many nights I never slept a wink, and I had weak spells, when I fainted dead away.

"After spending over a thousand dollars trying to get well, my husband finally persuaded me to take the Tanlac treatment. Well, that was the turning point, for all my troubles are gone now, I have almost regained my lost weight, and I've never enjoyed finer health. I will always believe Tanlac saved my life, and I'm so happy and grateful that I just can't help praising it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

As a general thing, the boss of the house is the one who can be most disagreable.

Mrs. Edward Pinson

Wheelersburg, Ohio—"My wife had pneumonia about six years ago and it left her with a dreadful cough. At night she would cough until she was exhausted. She could get no rest or sleep. Her stomach was so bad that she could not retain food. She went down in flesh until she was merely skin and bones. I had tried many doctors and medicines but still she grew worse. At last a neighbor who had relied upon Dr. Pierce's medicines for years, told me about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and before she had taken all of the first bottle she began to improve. By the time she had the third bottle taken her cough had entirely stopped. She gained in flesh and weighed twenty-nine pounds more than before she took the 'Discovery.'"—Edw. Pinson.

Go at once to your neighborhood drug store and get the 'Discovery' in tablets or liquid and you'll be surprised at the way you'll pick up.
